The Eagle Books

In the original Eagle Book series, a young boy, Rain that Dances, discovers an unhappy eagle. Mr. Eagle is tearful because many of the people in the community are developing a disease called type 2 diabetes. Rain that Dances invites his friends Thunder Cloud, Little Hummingbird, and Simon to hear what the eagle has to say about staying healthy. The great bird assures the children that people can help to prevent type 2 diabetes by eating nourishing foods, being active, and following the traditions of their ancestors.

Coyote and the Turtle's Dream

In the original Eagle Books stories, Rain and his friends were about six years old. However, in this new story, Coyote and the Turtle's Dream, they are entering the 7th grade. Once again, the eagle gives a warning to Rain, but this time it is about the disappearance of water on their reservation. Never forgetting the health messages taught to them by the eagle, the kids embark on a mystery/adventure to solve a riddle about ancient fossils that will restore the water's flow.

Hummingbird's Squash

In Hummingbird's Squash, our young heroes continue their adventures under the watchful eyes of Sky Heart, the eagle, and Thistle, the rabbit. In this story, Hummingbird pursues an ambitious plan to grow healthy foods that will help the community prevent type 2 diabetes. Little does she know that Coyote is leading her, Rain, Boomer, Simon and her new "sister," Arianna, on a path of knowledge that reveals what it means to embrace all of one's relatives and honor the wisdom of ancestors.

About Diabetes

Diabetes is a disease in which blood glucose levels are above normal. Most of the food we eat is turned into glucose, or sugar, for our bodies to use for energy. The pancreas, an organ that lies near the stomach, makes a hormone called insulin to help glucose get into the cells of our bodies. When you have diabetes, your body either doesn't make enough insulin or can't use its own insulin as well as it should. This causes sugar to build up in your blood.

Type 1 diabetes, which was previously called insulin-dependent diabetes mellitus (IDDM) or juvenile-onset diabetes, may account for about 5% of all diagnosed cases of diabetes. The causes of type 1 diabetes appear to be much different than those for type 2 diabetes, though the exact mechanisms for developing both diseases are unknown. The appearance of type 1 diabetes is suspected to follow exposure to an "environmental trigger," such as an unidentified virus, stimulating an immune attack against the beta cells of the pancreas (that produce insulin) in some genetically predisposed people. Researchers are making progress in identifying the exact genetics and "triggers" that predispose some individuals to develop type 1 diabetes, but prevention remains elusive.

Type 2 diabetes, which was previously called non-insulin-dependent diabetes mellitus (NIDDM) or adult-onset diabetes, may account for about 90% to 95% of all diagnosed cases of diabetes. A number of studies have shown that regular physical activity can significantly reduce the risk of developing type 2 diabetes. The Diabetes Prevention Program (DPP), a major federally funded study of 3,234 people at high risk for diabetes, showed that people can delay and possibly prevent the disease by losing a small amount of weight (5 to 7 percent of total body weight) through 30 minutes of physical activity 5 days a week and healthier eating.

Preface

To all the fans of the Eagle Books, CDC's Native Diabetes Wellness Program is pleased to present Coyote and the Turtle's Dream: the Graphic Novel. We hope that our readers enjoy this adaptation of the original youth novel, Coyote and the Turtle's Dream. The story is shorter, but we have enlivened the plot with new characters and more action. We think you will really like the dream scenes—Rain's dream of the eagle and a new dream in which our young hero swims with the Great Turtle in her ancient underwater world. Coyote's encounter with a bad tooth and illustrations of the fossil poaching gang in their hide-out are pretty exciting, too. Needless to say, the graphic novel puts you right in the picture when Rain and his friends bring the eagle's messages about preventing type 2 diabetes to their school and community.

On behalf of Terry Lofton, our author, and Patrick Rolo, our illustrator, we hope that the "power of words" (and imagery) take you on an adventure with Rain, Boomer, Hummingbird, Simon and Arianna that you will long remember.

Acknowledgements

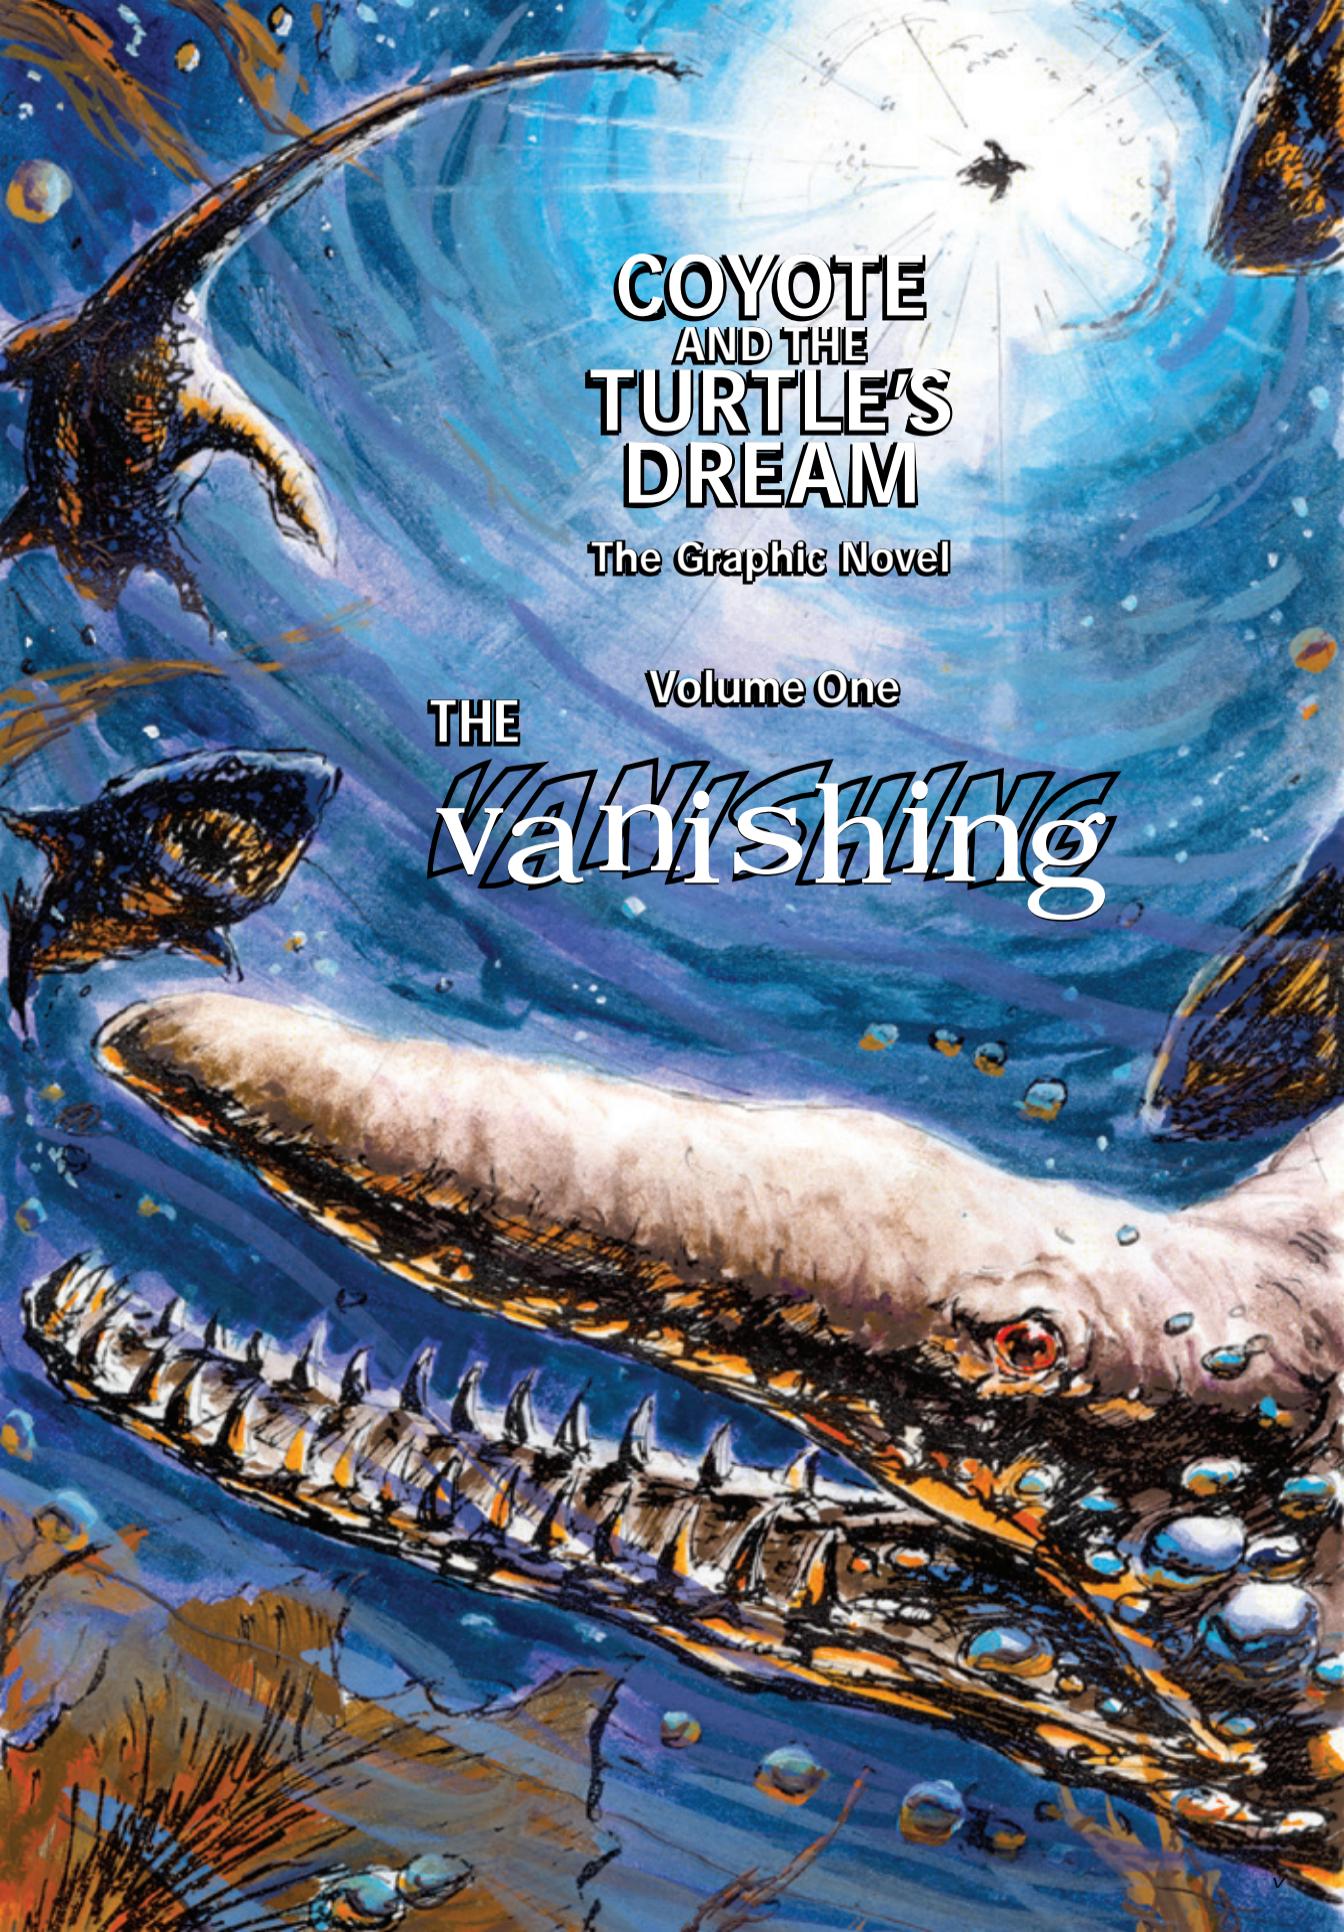

The Native Diabetes Wellness Program would like to thank the following people and organizations that played a role in the development of Coyote and the Turtle's Dream: the Graphic Novel.

First, we want to recognize the Tribal Leaders Diabetes Committee (TLDC) for its unfailing support of the Eagle Books project. Buford Rolin, Chairman of the Poarch Band of Creek Indians, Chair of the TLDC and Vice Chair of the National Indian Health Board (NIHB); Judy Goforth Parker, Chickasaw Nation Health System, former TLDC member; and H. Sally Smith, NIHB board member and Alaska Area Representative, former TLDC member, all saw the potential for storytelling as a way to reach children with a message of hope. As a result of their support, children who read the Coyote and the Turtle's Dream: the Graphic Novel will learn that healthy foods and physical activity can help to promote health and prevention of type 2 diabetes.

Many thanks also go to Indian Health Service, Division of Diabetes Treatment and Prevention, and CDC's Tribal Advisory Committee (TAC) for their continued partnership and support.

Additionally, the Wellness Program wants to express its gratitude to Georgia Perez, the author of the original Eagle Books, and to the Baros Family for all their insights regarding type 1 diabetes.

And lastly, we acknowledge our great partners on the Eagle Books project, Westat, and Kauffman and Associates, Inc.

THISTLE?

who
is it?

it's ME--

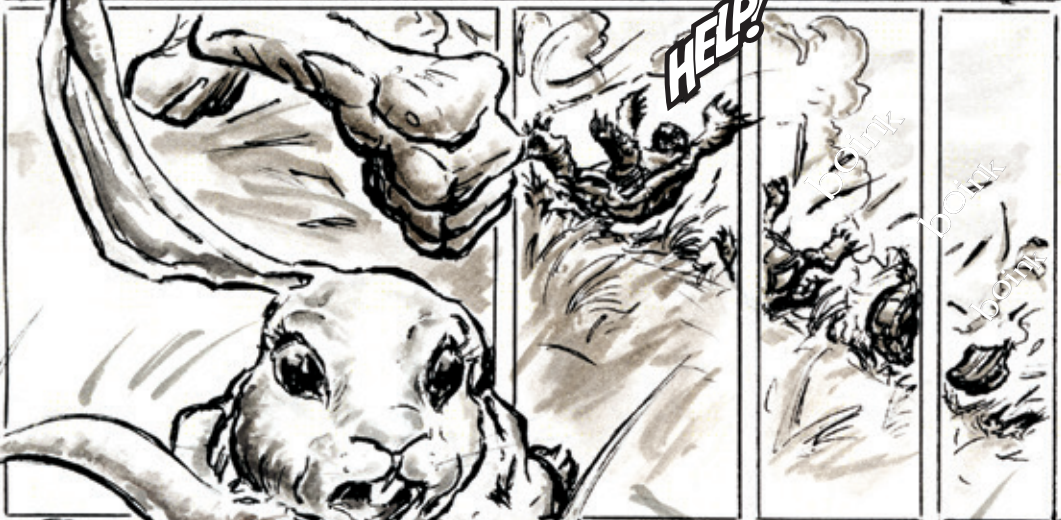

grandmother?!

why
are you in the high
meadow?

grandmother
TURTLE.

i'm looking for --

OH HH,
i'm so tired--
such a long way-- i feel -- shaky

Under usual circumstances a rabbit and turtle would never expose themselves to a bird that hunts small animals.

But these were not common circumstances, nor were these common animals.

They were the animals of stories, those animals whose wisdom is taught by storytellers on the long winter nights when the snowy winds howl and the people draw close to the fire.

After a short time, Sky Heart saw the tiny upturned faces of the rabbit and the small reptile.

The great bird recognized them instantly and began his descent.

grandmother!

thistle!

SKY HEART, i KNEW you would come!

how can i help you,
grandmother?

i'm AFRAID,
sky heart.

our WATER is going away!

yes,
it's true.
the creeks
ARE dry.

why is this happening?

"it's because of my great-great-great--oh, so MANY greats i can't count them--grandmother."

"her bones lie in the bed of an ancient sea that once covered this land."

"she swam that sea for a hundred years."

*"but she no longer

the long sleep."*

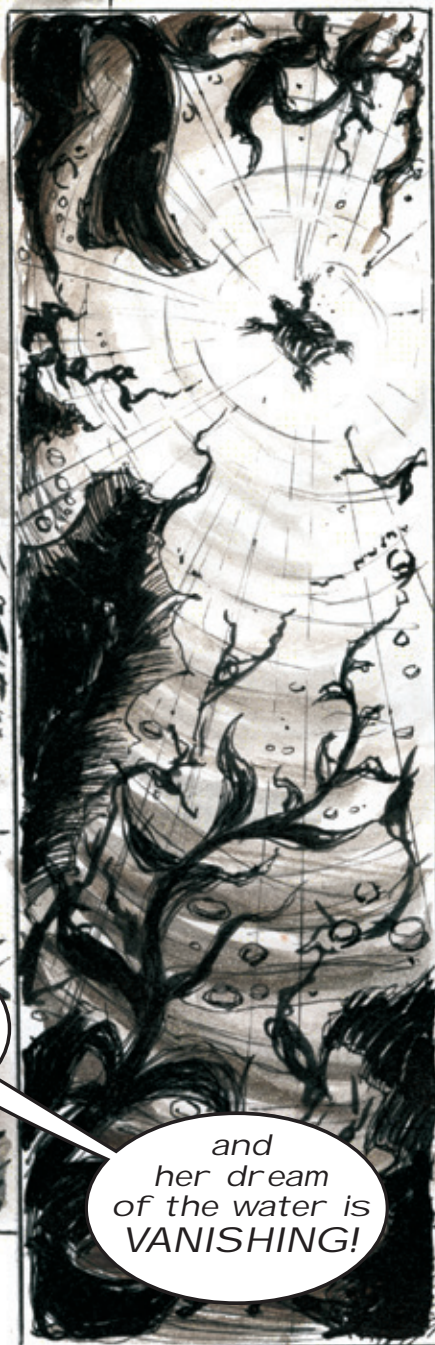

WHY?

the
HUMANS.

they're

The eagle rose on the warm air and flew over the Medicine Cave Indian Reservation. Below he could see the reservation's hills, valleys, woodlands, and grazing lands.

Passing over Red Water Mountain and Shell Ridge, Sky Heart saw what had troubled Grandmother Turtle. The water was gone from the rivers and creeks.

The eagle turned south toward the town of Thunder Rock. He watched the people down below as they went about their lives.

Sometimes the people had a hard time, but Sky Heart knew this was a good place and he did his best to be a wise messenger.

Arriving at the town, he flew over the middle school, looking for Rain that Dances. Rain was not there.

Continuing his search, Sky Heart flew to the little blue house where Rain's family lived. On the way he scanned the nearby roads and trails.

Suddenly, Sky Heart spotted Rain and his friend, Boomer. They were running on a path that led to the old park. He circled above as they tossed a basketball back and forth between them.

boomer, do you ever wonder if the eagle was just a dream?

HEY! did you hear me?

i HEARD ya, rd! hold on. let me take my shot.

Rain that Dances stopped and looked down the hill to the old stump. It was barely visible in the shadows of the late afternoon sun.

Boomer glanced back at his best friend. What was he worrying about now? Boomer, an easy-going boy, just couldn't figure out RD sometimes.

YEAH, the eagle really told us all that stuff about diabetes.

i, thunder cloud, THE BOOMER, say so!

sometimes i wish it WASN'T real.

i mean--

i just worry we aren't doing enough about preventing diabetes.

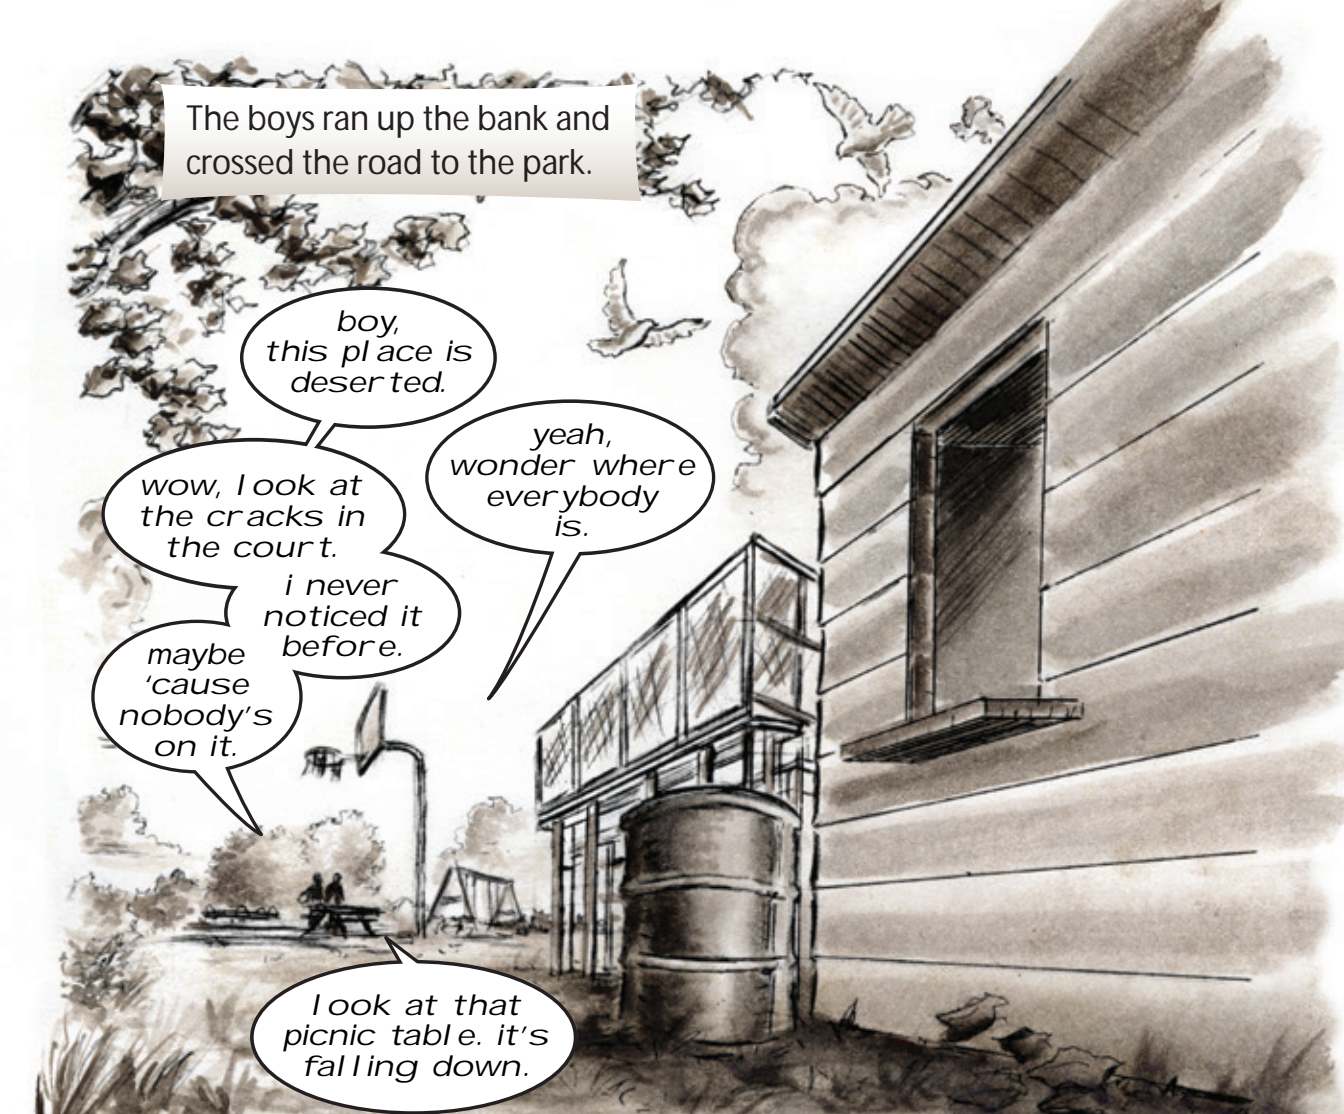

boomer!
you're gonna PAY for that noogie!

Rain, rubbing his head, laughed and followed.
Just wait 'til they got on the basketball court!

Crossing Salt Lick Creek, the boys noticed something strange.

HEY! who dammed up the creek?

ask your dad. maybe he'll know.

The boys ran up the bank and crossed the road to the park.

boy,
this place is deserted.

wow, I look at the cracks in the court.

i never noticed it before.

maybe
'cause
nobody's
on it.

yeah,
wonder where everybody
is.

Look at that picnic table. it's falling down.

hey, here's your mom's
name. she must have played here when she was a kid.

you know--in
the OLDEN days.

and your aunt
sissey, too.

aunt sissey
a kid? HA HA!
NEVER!

come
on, let's play--

A boy in a basketball uniform is running towards a basketball hoop. He is holding the ball with both hands. In the background, there are some trees and a building.

Rain ran to the basketball court. Boomer followed. Laughing, Rain passed the ball to Boomer and the game was on.

A boy is holding a basketball with both hands. He is looking towards the right. Another boy is standing next to him, looking at the ball.

someone call the doctor 'cuz that move was sick!

A boy is falling backwards. His arms and legs are outstretched. There are some motion lines around him to indicate the fall.

watch out, man!

BAM

WAAAAH
WAAAAH

A boy is lying on the ground, looking up. He has a surprised expression. Another boy is sitting next to him.

Look, r.d. there's jimmy. let's make it two-on-one.

HEY!
JIMMY!

Jimmy didn't look up. He was too busy throwing something into the trash barrel.

gotta get rid of 'em!
i gotta!

HEY!
JIMMY!

he didn't hear you.

you kiddin'?
as loud as i am?

they don't call me BOOMER for nothin'.

let's go see what he threw away.

what is it?

an old cigar box.

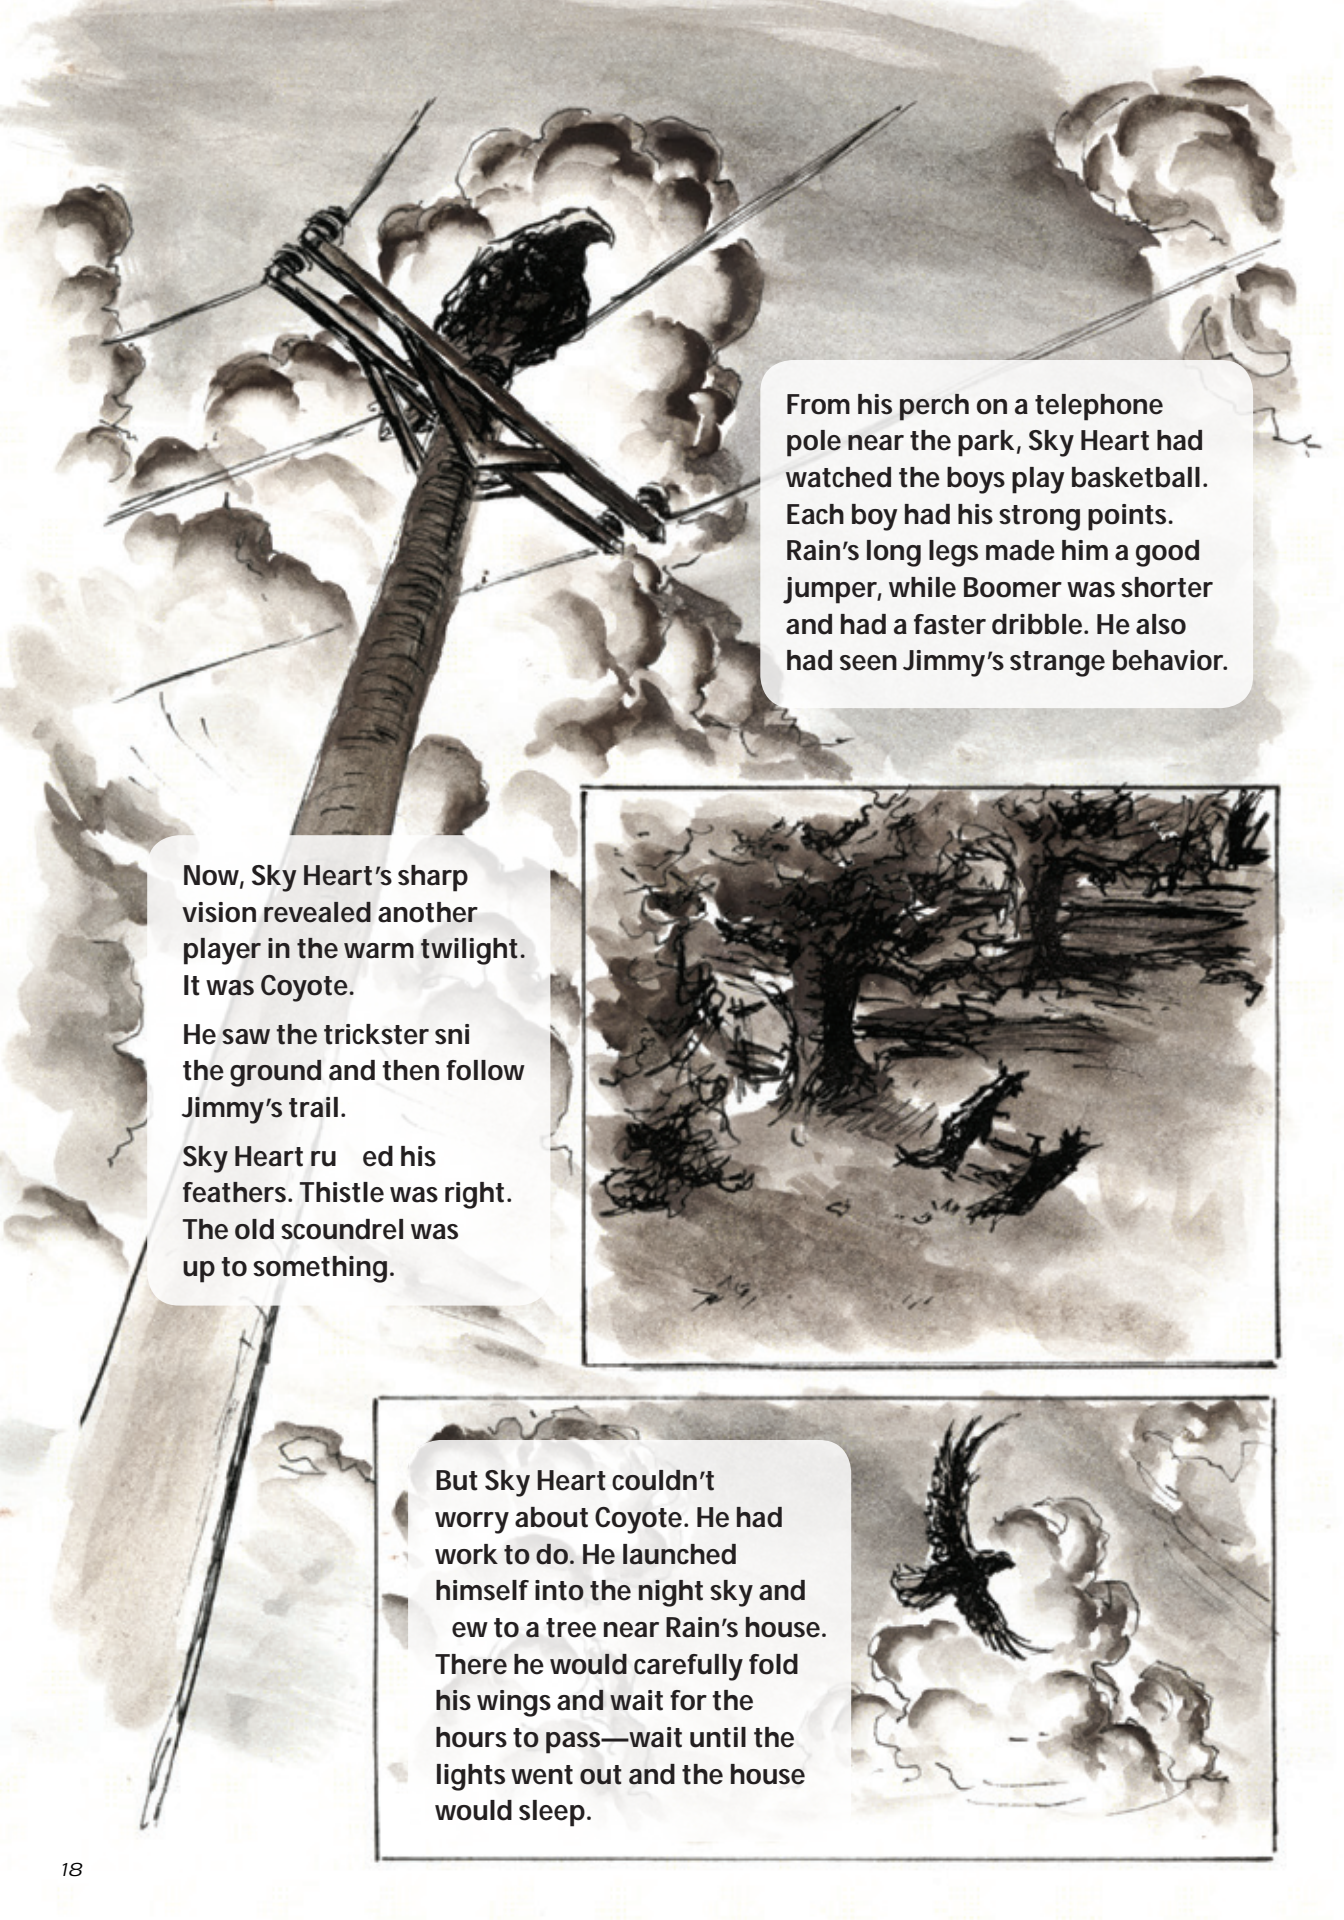

open it.

are they rocks?

i guess.

we better get home. it's gettin' dark.

i'll bring 'em to school tomorrow.

From his perch on a telephone pole near the park, Sky Heart had watched the boys play basketball. Each boy had his strong points. Rain's long legs made him a good jumper, while Boomer was shorter and had a faster dribble. He also had seen Jimmy's strange behavior.

Now, Sky Heart's sharp vision revealed another player in the warm twilight. It was Coyote.

He saw the trickster sni the ground and then follow Jimmy's trail.

Sky Heart ru ed his feathers. Thistle was right. The old scoundrel was up to something.

But Sky Heart couldn't worry about Coyote. He had work to do. He launched himself into the night sky and ew to a tree near Rain's house. There he would carefully fold his wings and wait for the hours to pass—wait until the lights went out and the house would sleep.

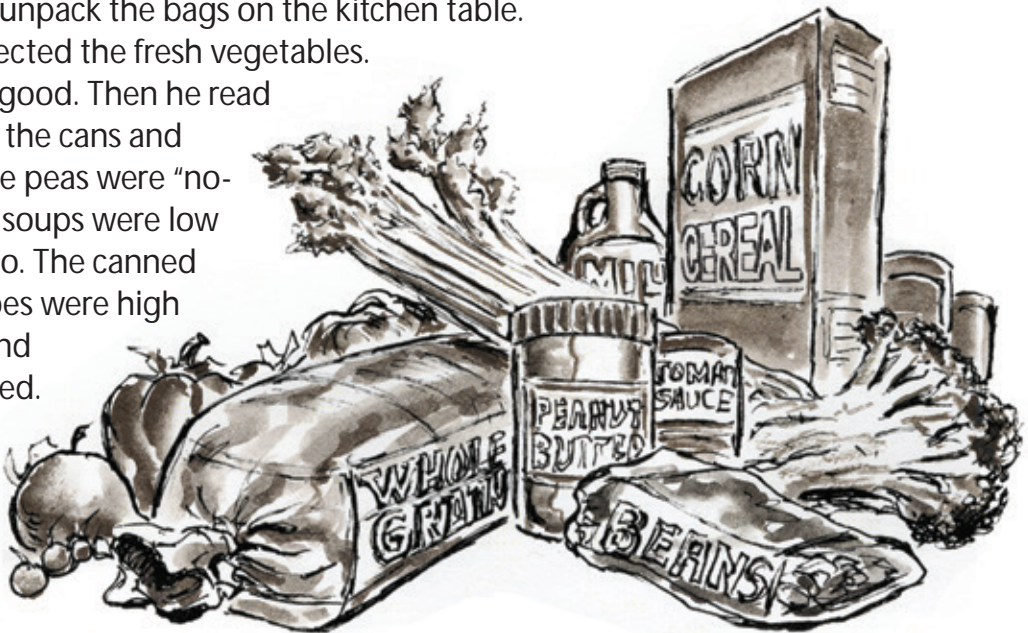

Rain ran up the pathway to his house. Roberta, his mother, was waiting...

rain,
help me
unload the groceries,
okay?

sure,
mom. i'm coming!

Rain grabbed the groceries from the trunk of the car. He began to unpack the bags on the kitchen table. First, he inspected the fresh vegetables. They looked good. Then he read the labels on the cans and packages. The peas were "no-salt" and the soups were low in sodium, too. The canned sweet potatoes were high in vitamins and ber. He smiled. His mom was really a good shopper.

Rain picked up an armload of canned goods. Heading to the cupboard, he turned and almost tripped over his little sister, Margie.

Rain was Margie's hero. She always wanted to be doing what her big brother was doing.

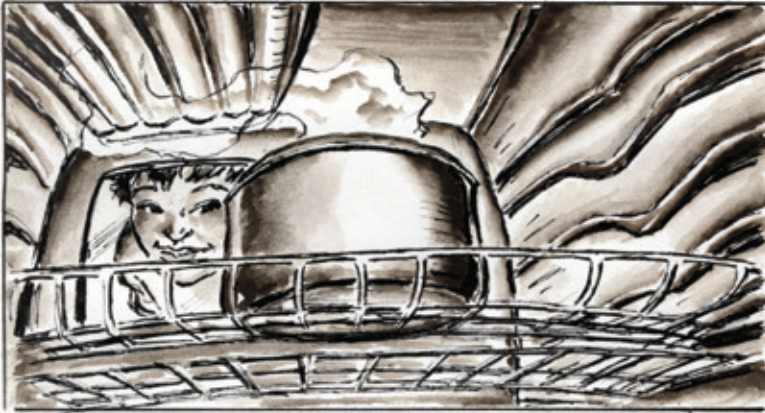

I et ME
help!

sure, margie,
put the carrots
and celery
in the fridge.

Roberta watched her son go through his nightly routine.

After putting away the groceries, Rain headed to the stove. He checked the vegetables that were starting to bubble in the pots.

*hmmm,
he's smiling.
i guess we pass inspection
tonight.*

Then he leaned down and peered through the oven's glass window. Steam was rising from the bean pot. He loved his mother's baked beans. They would be great with the leftover bison meatloaf.

For years now, Rain had watched what his family ate. He also paid attention to their physical activity. Strangely, Rain and his best friends were extremely interested in type 2 diabetes. They said eating healthy food and being active helped to prevent it. They were always searching for information about diabetes on the Internet.

Roberta learned a lot about type 2 diabetes from Rain. She learned so much that she decided to become a CHR* for the Tribe. She liked teaching about prevention and how people with diabetes could stay healthy.

*Community Health Representative

Suddenly, the back door banged open. Gerald, Rain's father, trudged in from work. Gerald developed jobs for the reservation. He was a busy man. But not too busy to ask Rain about the first week of school.

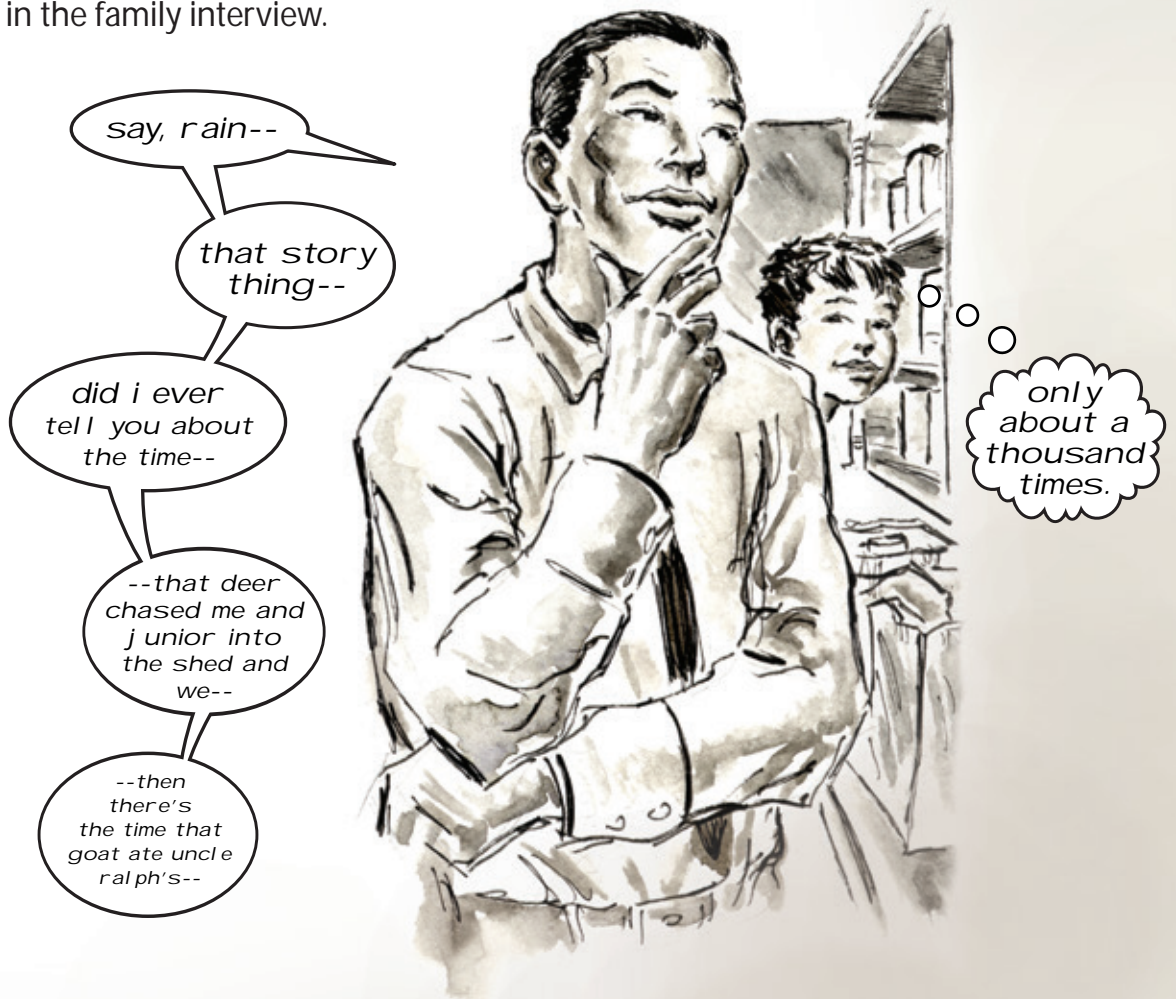

Rain told him about the new Native language program. He was also excited about the family interview for Mrs. Corn's language class. The class was supposed to write up family stories they never heard before.

Gerald was really interested in the family interview.

you look tired.

yeah,
we had an emergency council meeting.

say, rain--

that story
thing--

did i ever tell you about
the time--

--that deer
chased me and j unior into the shed and we--

--then there's the time that goat ate uncle
ralph's--

only about a thousand times.

Thankfully, the phone rang before Gerald could dig up another old tale.

Gerald hung up the phone. He looked worried. He said water was drying up everywhere on the reservation. Rain asked if someone was damming the river. Gerald shook his head. Even the water in the wells had dropped.

Roberta was suspicious.

Gerald also told them that some towns on the rez didn't have drinking water. The Tribal Council was bringing in "water bu aloes."

When supper was ready, Roberta sent Rain to get Granma and Margie. Granma Hettie, Roberta's grandmother, was watching the weather channel. Granma and Margie loved to watch the big storms together. Gerald called them the "weather girls."

The TV was so loud it hurt Rain's ears. Supposedly, Granma was deaf, but she heard things when she wanted to.

After supper, Rain went to his room where he had stashed the cigar box. He opened it and stared at the puzzling objects. Forget this, he thought, I've got homework to do. He turned his attention to pre-algebra. Happily, the worksheet of number problems was easy.

Looking at the clock, Rain saw there was time for some TV. He went to the living room. The weather channel was silent. Granma and Margie had gone to bed.

Rain picked up the remote and clicked through the programs. "Eat or Be Eaten"—Boomer's favorite show; "Jobs for Jerks"—seen it; "Future Auto World"—almost over. Finally he settled on "Shark Mania."

Rain called out for his mom to come watch the show. She loved sharks.

After a half hour of shark attacks, Roberta and Rain were yawning. The show was exciting, but they were really tired. Turning o the TV, Roberta told Rain that she and her friends used to nd shark teeth at Shell Ridge when they were kids.

really,
mom?

could
we go hunting
for shark teeth
sometime?

j ust
think. there must have been an OCEAN
here a long time
ago.

seems like
we need an ocean
right now.

Rain said good night and went to his bedroom. He resisted the urge to look inside the cigar box one more time. Why did Jimmy throw it away? Maybe Hummingbird and Simon could gure it out. For some reason the strange rocks worried him.

Rain put on his favorite pajamas. After brushing his teeth, he plopped into bed and snuggled into Granma's oldest quilt. Mom said it was ready for the ragbag, but Rain wasn't about to give it up.

Rain pulled the soft old cover over his chin and slept.

From his perch, Sky Heart watched the house go dark. Only the dim glow of the porch light waited for Gerald's return.

Suddenly, the eagle spread his mighty wings and rose into the sky.

But he was not flying very far...

...only to the dead limb of a tree outside Rain's bedroom window.

There he waited until the moon had set and the night air was still. Waited until Rain had slipped deep into dream sleep. Then, the eagle tucked his head and slept, too.

Drifting into sleep,
Rain began to dream.

oh, NO.
i'm LATE.

WHAT?
where's my
PANTS?

HOW could i have come to school --
in only a T-SHIRT?

doesn't anyone
NOTICE?

if i can
j ust get to
my SEAT--

please,
NO! don't call on me!

i can't stand up
in front of the class like
THIS!

huh?

Suddenly, Rain
was in a different dream. A dream
full of butterflies.

hey,
there's the stump where i first met the eagle!

i hear
singing!

b
TAB OUR FEET
ON THE GROUND.
LEFT FOOT FIRST
THEN RIGHT FOOT NEXT.
C

C CLAP OUR HANDS AND MARCH AROUND b

mr. eagle?

yes, i remember.

then,
sing with
me!

LET'S FLAP OUR ARMS AND PRETEND WE CAN FLY
LET'S ALL BE EAGLES

FLYING HIGH IN THE SKY...

Rain began singing
but quickly stopped.
The bird had started
to sing words he didn't know.

As the Eagle's voice
climbed higher
and higher, Rain felt
an odd sensation.
He was beginning
to float—as if in a strange sea.

On the song's power, Rain began to rise high into a dreamscape of sky and water.

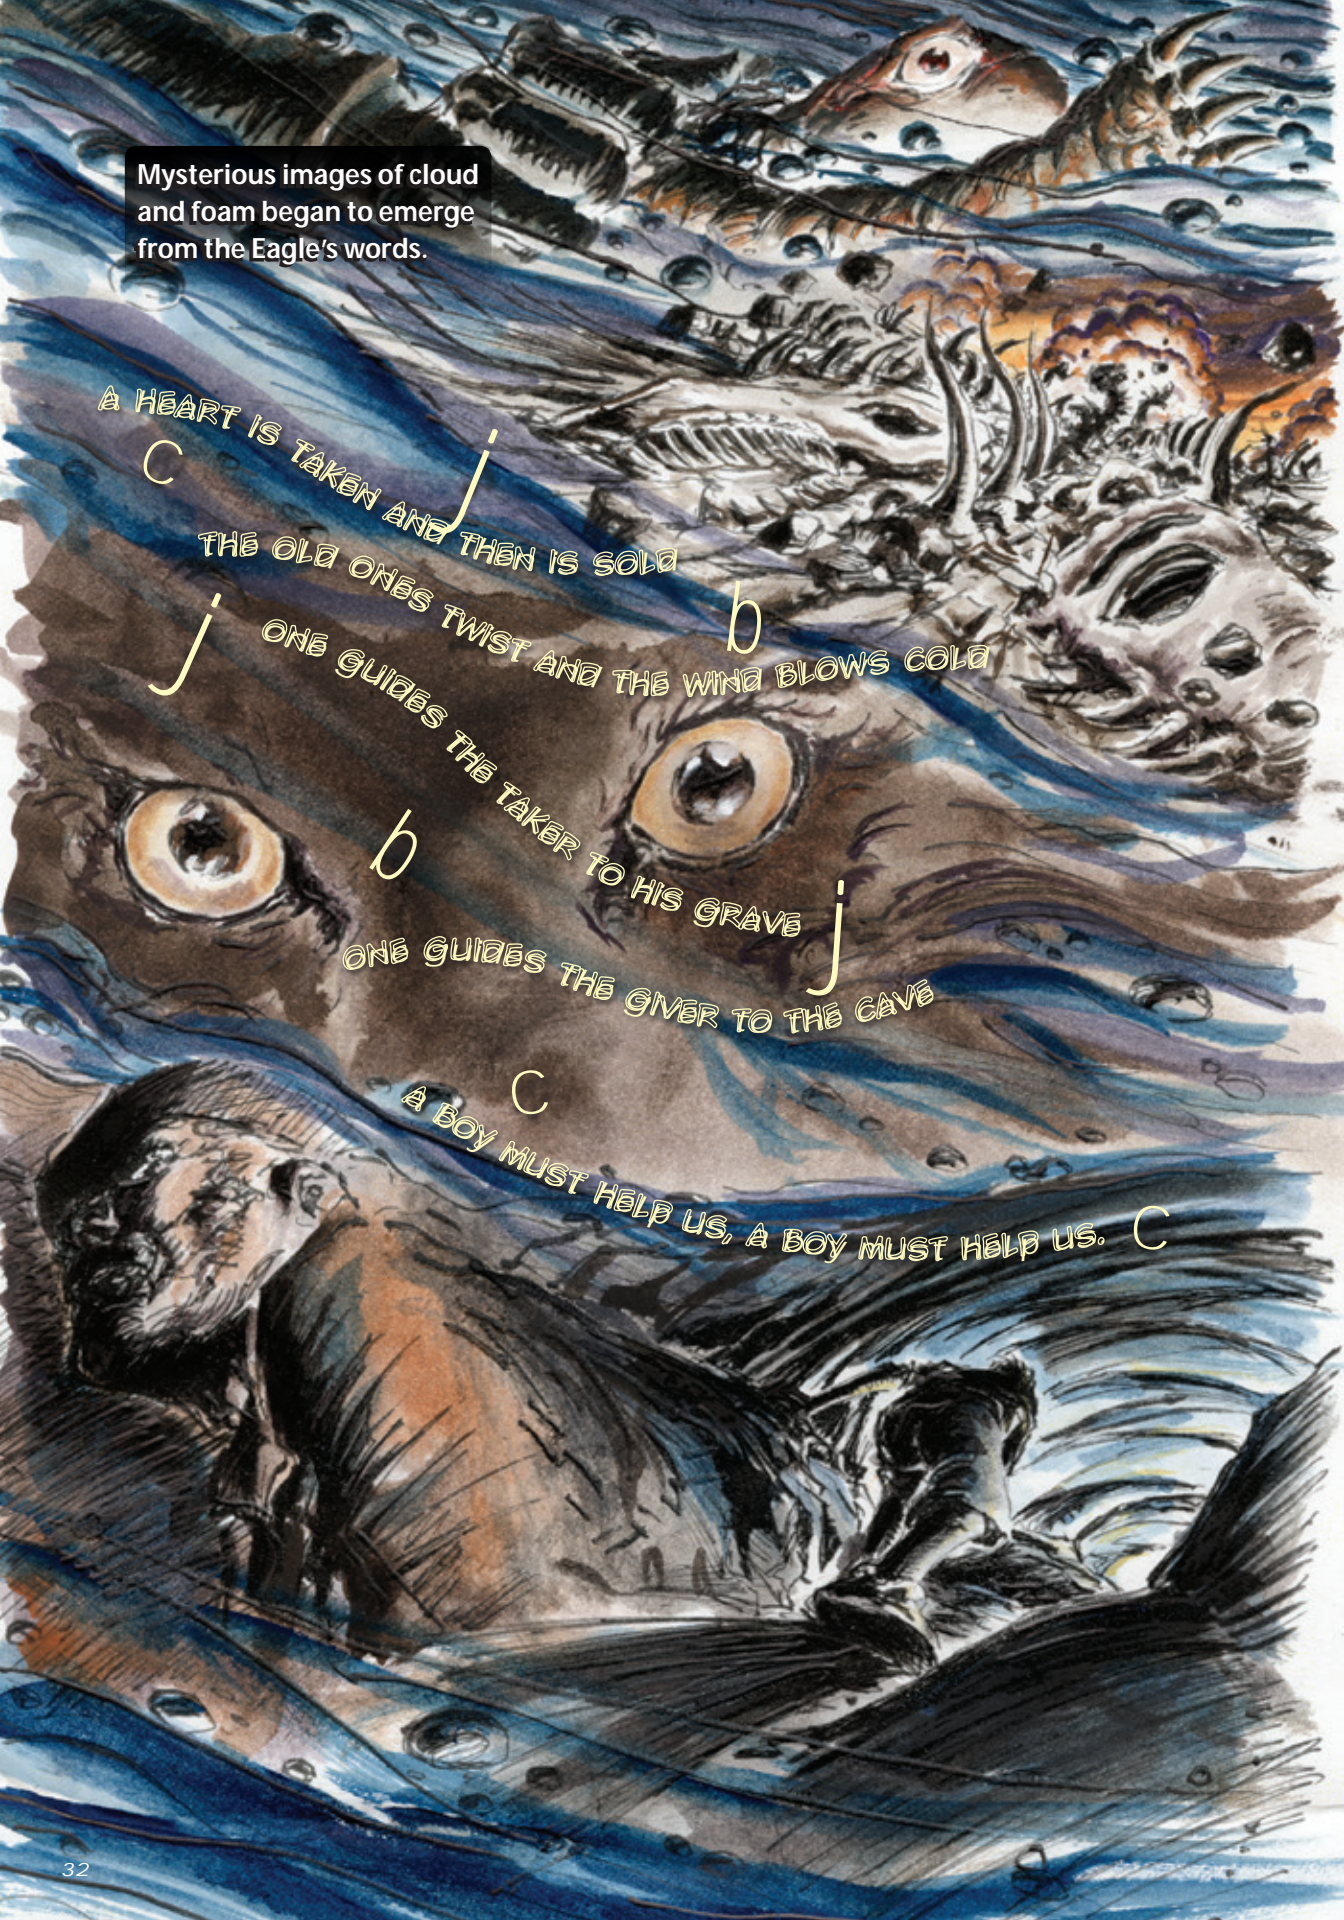

C j

TURTLE AWAKENS AND THE WATER GOES.

j b
EARTH AND BODY IN BALANCE BE C

WATER AND BLOOD IN HARMONY. j

b C
A BOY MUST HELP US, A BOY MUST HELP US.

j ONE GUIDES THE TAKER TO HIS GRAVE
b ONE GUIDES THE GIVER TO THE CAVE

C A BOY MUST HELP US, A BOY MUST HELP US. C

Finally, the Eagle's voice faded away, ending his strange plea for help.

Rain descended slowly from
the dream.
He could hear the eagle—far above
—once again
singing the old
game song.

b EAST OR WEST, UP AND DOWN, WE'LL START AGAIN b AND GO ROUND AND ROUND, ROUND AND ROUND, ROUND AND ROUND!

He spiraled downward
toward the tree stump—
its crooked limbs
illuminated in sunlight.

Rays of early morning light were shining through the window. Rain turned his face to the sun. Although awake, he didn't move for several minutes. Confused, he forced his eyes open. Rain sat up and swung his legs onto the floor. Even though he was groggy, he reached for a pencil and started writing down the dream as fast as he could.

Suddenly, Roberta rapped at the door.

hey, mister!
you still doing
homework?

you're late!

Rain ran to the kitchen and wolfed down a bowl of cereal. No time for a shower, he brushed his teeth and threw on some clothes. For a moment he started thinking about being at school without his pants. Where did that come from?

Rain stuffed the cigar box in his backpack and raced out the front door.

Jumping off the front porch, he dashed for the road. A chilly wind was blowing. Shivering, he wished he'd worn a jacket.

Rain glanced down the road. No school bus yet. Good, he thought, it's late...

you better get your head out of the clouds, boy, and pay attention to where you're GOING!

aunt sissy! she's always on my case.

YUK, she'll be here when i get home.

Luckily, the school bus came and Rain was able to escape.

He pulled himself up the steps and looked for his best friend.

Boomer waved.
He always saved
Rain a seat.

Rain sat down
and glanced at the comic book Boomer was reading. It was

The boys used the rest of the ride to finish a short story for Mrs. Corn's class. They were on the last page when the bus pulled into the driveway of Thunder Rock Middle School.

Rain and Boomer joined the students crowding into the school's main door. No one noticed the Range Rover parked across from the school. A shadowy figure sat on the driver's side. He was in no hurry. He searched the face of every kid getting off the buses. When he didn't see what he was looking for, he drove away—very slowly. Men in his business didn't want to attract attention.

Once inside the school, Rain bypassed homeroom. He poked his head into each 7th grade classroom until he spotted Hummingbird. She was gossiping with her friends.

you're KIDDING, sammie.

does mr. pence really LIKE her--?

well, he j ust DROOLS whenever she-- uh oh, bird, mr. veggie-man's here!

oh, go eat some prunes-- SAMANTHA.

hey, r,d, what's up?

Rain motioned her over. Hummingbird stepped quickly to the door. Lowering his voice, he asked her to meet him in the library after lunch. He had something important to tell her. Hummingbird was puzzled.

what's he worried about now?

sure, the library--after lunch.

i've got something to tell you, too.

okay!

Rain skidded into class—just before Mrs. Biddy slammed the door. Being in her homeroom was embarrassing. Kids were always clucking and apping their arms at the “chickens” in Mrs. Biddy’s “coop.” It got old.

Rain took his seat in front of Boomer. Mrs. Biddy called the roll. Friday was always a big day for absences. When she repeated Jimmy’s name twice, the boys noticed that his seat was empty. This wasn’t good.

Mrs. Biddy peered through her glasses at the class. She wasn’t happy. She squawked a warning about the truant officer* before the class stood to recite the pledge of allegiance. The words “and justice for all” were lost in the “brrriinnnggg” of the next bell. The boys joined the crush in the hallway and hurried to their first class.

*An official who investigates absences from school that are not excused.

First period dragged on to second and third. Rain thought lunchtime would never come. All he could think about was the dream. Then he would start thinking about Jimmy and the cigar box. Finally, Coach Brown released the boys from gym class.

Rain followed the smell of baking bread to the cafeteria. The school cook made the best whole wheat rolls! Rain was glad he didn't have time to make his lunch today.

Simon, one of Rain's best friends, already had a table.

Rain waved and headed for the food line. Pushing his tray along, he picked up chicken chowder and a whole wheat roll. Then he spotted the salad xings.

Grabbing a load of lettuce, he glanced at the boy ahead of him in line. It was Ronald from gym class. He had piled his tray with two packaged burgers, fries, macaroni salad, and two brownies. Ronald was eyeing Rain's tray. He didn't look impressed.

Rain paid for his lunch and hurried to sit with his friends. Boomer and Hummingbird had joined Simon.

i've been telling them about jimmy and the rocks!

Rain put down his tray. He gulped down a couple of spoonfuls of chowder. Then, without saying a word, he pulled out the cigar box. He put it on the table so everyone could see. Slowly, he opened the lid. Four pairs of eyes stared at the mysterious contents. Simon and Hummingbird reached into the box.

so, simon, bird. what do you think?

this is a FOSSIL, not a rock.

see, it's knobby, like a bone.

i think so, too.

but, what kind?

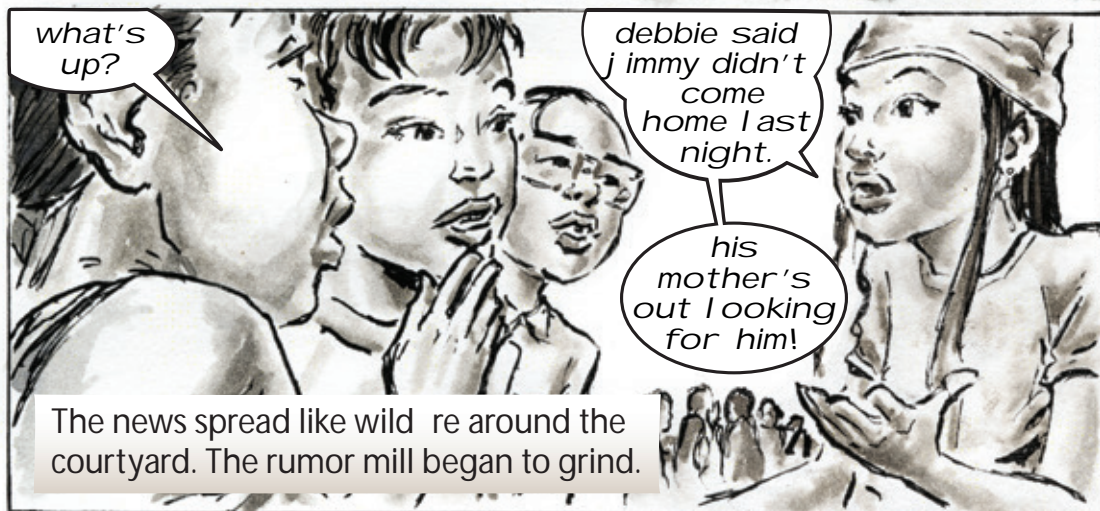

i don't know-- but they're fossils, FOR SURE.

Simon knew bones. He was the big dinosaur man in the group. No way Rain or Boomer would argue with Simon about fossils. He had probably seen "Jurassic Park" a hundred times.

Rain put the fossils back in the cigar box. Finishing his salad, he glanced at the clock. Lunch was almost over. The foursome dumped their trash and followed the crowd to the courtyard.

The students got free time after lunch. Most kids went outside to the courtyard. The girls usually talked under the big tree, while the boys just ran around. Today Rain, Boomer and Simon weren't interested in running around.

About the Native Diabetes Wellness Program

The mission of the Native Diabetes Wellness Program is to work with a growing circle of partners to address the health inequities so starkly revealed by type 2 diabetes in Indian Country. With social justice and respect for Native and Western science as grounding principles, we strive to support community efforts to promote health and prevent diabetes.

For more information about diabetes and diabetes prevention, go to the National Diabetes Education Program's website, <http://ndep.nih.gov>. Under "Find Publications for Me," select the drop down box for "Age" and find "Teens and Children." Posted are tips for teens with diabetes, and tips for how kids can lower their risk for developing type 2 diabetes.
